Article Overview

Single-mode optical fiber costs roughly $1.5 million to $5 million per ton, depending on cable type and market conditions.

Pricing Overview

Single-mode fiber optic cables typically cost between $0.10 and $0.50 per foot for the raw cable material, with bulk purchases sometimes reaching $2 to $7 per foot for pre-terminated or armored options . Prices vary based on fiber count, construction type (tight-buffered, loose-tube, armored), and intended application (indoor, outdoor, direct burial), . In 2026, market conditions have caused significant price surges, with contract quotations doubling or tripling in some regions due to high demand and limited supply .

Estimating Cost per Ton

To convert per-foot pricing to per-ton pricing, consider the following:

- Weight of fiber cable: A typical single-mode fiber cable weighs approximately 0.1 to 0.2 kg per meter (or 0.03 to 0.06 lb per foot), depending on strand count and jacket material .
- Conversion: 1 ton = 2,000 lb. Using an average weight of 0.05 lb/ft, 1 ton corresponds to roughly 40,000 feet of cable.
- Cost calculation: At $2 to $7 per foot, 40,000 feet would cost approximately $80,0...
