

How to accept orders for custom-made distribution boxes

Article Overview

Accepting orders for custom-made distribution boxes involves gathering detailed specifications, providing quotes, confirming designs, and managing production and delivery efficiently.

Step 1: Gather Detailed Customer Requirements

Before accepting an order, collect all necessary information to ensure the product meets the client's needs. Key details include:

- Type of installation: Indoor or outdoor, wall-mounted or floor-standing
- Environmental conditions: Humidity, dust, or corrosive exposure
- Electrical specifications: Number of circuits, load type, and power requirements
- Dimensions and material preferences: Stainless steel, aluminum, or other metals, with IP ratings for waterproofing
- Additional features: IoT integration, remote control, modularity, branding, and color schemes

Step 2: Provide a Quote and Confirm Feasibility

Once specifications are collected, calculate pricing based on materials, complexity, and quantity. Use a transparent quoting process to avoid confusion. Include:

- Material and finishing costs...
